W. J. BRYAN SAYS AMERICA HAS PRIZE IN HAND

Great Commoner Writing for United Press During Conference

HAVE OPPORTUNITIES

America May go so Far, Other Nations Will be Bound to Follow Lead

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN
(Copyright 1921 by United Press:)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The conference which is about to assemble may prove to be the most important gathering in centuries, or it may bring the greatest disappointment experienced in generations.

It all depends upon the real purpose of the actors—a purpose that can be revealed only by acts.

If the delegates believe universal and perpetual peace possible, they will try to secure it; if not, they will not attempt anything of real and permanent importance.

It is a conference from which any one of the nations may emerge a hero. The United States may surprise the world by offering so much that the other nations will be compelled to accept the offer and end war.

Japan may anonunce a willingness to go so far as to insure the success of the conference.

Great Britain may step to the front and settle discussion by appellations which will leave the other nations no alternative but to accept.

France may find in disarmament her greatest security, and point the way to world peace.

Who will win the capital prize, which in this case will be the plaudits of the world and the gratitude of posterity?

The United States has the best position. She extends the invitation and has the first move. More than that, the traditional policy has been to rely upon her pacifist intentions rather than on fleets and armies. In the present instances she has a mighty asset in the debts due her.

Suppose the United States were to step forward and say "We are willing to pay ten billions for the progressive disarmament of the world, begun at once and continued until the navies are no larger than necessary to police the seas, and the armies no larger than necessary to preserve peace on land." Could the nations refuse the offer?

Ten billions of debt cancelled on such conditions would enable the allies and their enemies to get together and so distribute the sums as to bring a large measure of financial relief to every nation involved in the war, and this relief would restore friendly relations and permit a disarmament otherwise impossible. The cancellation of this debt, added to the reduction of military and naval expenses, would give the world a new birth and go far towards restoring normal conditions in business.

Could the United States afford it? A reduction of one-half in her military and naval appropriations would enable her to save the amount in less than twenty years; a reduction of three-fourths in army and navy expenses would enable her to save the amount in less than fifteen years.

It will be difficult for the debtor nations to pay the sum and the obligation to pay it is made the basis for indemnities which, however just, threaten the amity of Europe for generations and thus furnish an excuse for military and naval expenditures scarcely less burdensome than the indemnities.

Would the American people support such a proposition? Why not? They are sentimental; they spent over thirty billions to end war by means of war; would they not spend ten billions to end war by peaceful means? And, besides, the American people are practical. If they can save enough on military and naval appropriations in 15 or 20 years to compensate them for giving up the debt, why should they spend two or three times that sum on army and navy while they consume 100 years in collecting the debt, not to speak of the possible dangers that lurk in the attempt to collect such a debt from nations already overburdened. Has this nation any better offer to make? Is any other nation able to make so large a contribution toward the success of the conference?

SIMPLICITY WILL MARK SOCIAL SIDE

President Harding to Give Cue to Capital Society During Conference

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Simplicity will mark the social side of the Washington conference. President and Mrs. Harding will set the example with a dinner tomorrow night in the White House to the delegates and their wives. The function will be far away from the extravagant entertainments usually offered by society here. Washington hostesses are expected to take their cue from the Harding dinner.

Youngsters Getting Married is Subject for Caustic Article

Youngsters meet in a city par. They're off to the marriage license clerk. They're married. Both lie about their ages. The young husband asks annulment of the marriage and Henry James in his comments on the editorial page tonight says such brats should be rescued and spanked. And he says other things, too.

James W. Foley in his column talks about swamps and mosquitoes and the difference between the man who sat on the edge of the swamp and let the mosquitoes bite him and the philosopher who found a way to exterminate the pest. "The world advances in spite of the folly of the unthinking," says Mr. Foley.

Dr. Frank Crane is in a lazy mood this evening. He quotes from Lytton Stachey's book on "Queen Victoria." Della E. Stewart in her column finds a lesson in the country roads that seldom go straight to their goal. These are exceptionally good editorials on various subjects and your attention is directed to this best of all editorial pages.

WASHINGTON SCENE MUCH ACTIVITY ARMISTICE DAY

People from Every Nation Assemble to Watch Arms Parley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—America's capitol today became the capital of the world. With the arrival of Arthur Balfour and other British delegates Washington is ready for one of the greatest peace parleys in history.

On the eve of the conference interest centers on whether th Unitd States, as an evidence of its good faith, will offer to suspend naval construction during the sessions here. All the delegates are waiting eagerly for America to take the lead, either by proposing suspension of construction during the conference, or by submitting a definite program for arms limitation.

Washington is crowded with visitors from all over the world, Japanese, Chinese, French, Italian, British, Portuguese, Indians, mingle with the crowds on the streets, some wearing native costumes, with military representatives bedecked in flashy uniforms, spotted with medals.

Hotels are crowded with rates soaring daily.

The various delegations today are holding preliminary conferences but carefully guarding the cards which they will put on the conference table.

Continental memorial hall in the D. A. R. building is ready for the opening Saturday. In the center of the hall is a big horse shoe table, similar to the historic one at Versailles.

On three sides, will be seated about three hundred representatives of the press. Up in the gallaries will be members of congress, the supreme court and diplomatic representatives.

The delegates, representing the keenest brains of America, Europe and the East will assemble in Continental hall at 10:30 a. m. Saturday. After greetings from President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes, the conference expects to proceed to organization. Hughes probably will be permanent chairman.

The second open session is expected Monday or Tuesday, when perhaps the nation can gain an insight into what the conference really intends as to policy and procedure.

GERMANS LIVING HIGH

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—The minimum cost of living for every individual German has gone up to sixteen times the pre-war rate. The government fixed it at 396 marks, which is the equivalent of $3.02 at the present rate of exchange.

GERMANY IS ALMOST DISARMED WITH WORK KEEPING UP

Artillery, Small Arms, Airplanes Nearly All Put in Discard

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—German disarmament, so far as weapons of war are concerned, is practically completed according to the Interallied Control Commisison. Artillery, small arms, airplanes and fortifications have mostly been destroyed. A few fortresses on the Baltic sea, erected as protection from Russia, are now being dismantled.

Although no formal announcement has been made in Berlin, the International News Service is informed that recommendations have been made by General Nollet, the senior officer of the Interallied Commisison, which will cut down the size of the control commission. The reduction in personnel will come this spring.

The principal attention of the Interallied Commission is being given to the organization of the German police to prevent Germany from organizing a secret reserve army under the guise of police. At the present time the Sicherheits Polizei, or "green police," live in barracks and go through much of the drill formerly done by regulars on the drill ground.

Watch the Police

General Nollet's mission has several times had occasion to send notes to the German government protesting that the Allies can't permit the police of the various cities to be organized into one large controlling unit, with a central staff. The police consists largely of former non-commissioned officers in the army.

The Allies are giving much attention to the organization of a system of control which will make it impossible for Germany to manufacture any military supplies. Army wagons, field kitchens, signal equipment and army supply department material are either being destroyed or rendered unserviceable for military purposes.

Scarcely a week passes but what reports are brought in of hidden supplies of arms or munitions. The Allies offer a reward for information of this sort. Many of the reports prove to be false, but frequently the investigating officers discover several hundred rifles or machine guns buried in the woods, where no one can be inculpated if they are found. The weapons, however, are often hidden for use in possible civil war between radicals and reactionaries and are connected up with attempts to organize illicit home guards against the Reds, or a workman's army connected with a radical organization.

OMAHA, Nov. 10.—Charles T. Neal, 60, veteran grain man and vice-presirent of the United States Grain Corporation during the war, died here this morning of gastritis.

KING GEORGE SENDS WREATH FOR HERO WORLD STRIFE

Lloyd George Also Has Wreath Place on Casket of U. S. War Hero

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Homage unexcelled by that ever accorded an American hero was paid to the unknown soldier in the rotunda of the Capitol today, where the body lies in state.

Before the Capitol opened a long line of people were waiting outside. Within a few hours several thousand had filed by the catafalque. Scores of persons tossed flowers on the casket. At the corners of the catafalque stood four silent sentinels, comrades of the unknown hero.

The first ceremony of the day was held by veterans of foreign wars, composed entirely of overseas men. After the burial ritual of the organization was read, Col. Robert G. Woodside, commander, conferred the rank of honorary aide-de-camp, medal of honor section, upon the casket of the unknown soldier.

"My dear departed comrade," said Col. Woodside, "each one of us feels as though you are the comrade who fell fighting at our side as we stood in the trenches, or as we were advancing across No Man's land. Here at our shrine your comrades renew again their obligation of true allegiance to the United States. May we always remember our duty to the bereaved mothers and widows of our departed comrades. It is their day. May our love and sympathy go out to those who lost their dear ones in the service of the country."

Wreaths from King George of England and Prime Minister Lloyd George also were placed upon the catafalque. The inscription of King George's wreath read:

"As unknown, and yet well known;
As dying, and behold, we live."
"Namless, yet his name liveth forevermore," was the line of the Lloyd George wreath.

'IT'S MY BOY I KNOW' SAYS GOLD STAR MOTHER TODAY

Unknown Mother with Small Bouquet Feels Sure Hero Is Her Own Boy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Shivering a bit beneath a thin shawl she had waited long before the capitol. She was old and gray and bent. She was an unknown mother, come in from a small town quite distant that she might meet her boy, back after weary months from France. It was her boy who lay there in the rotunda—the unknown soldier back from France, honored and sung by the nation. She typified a score of mothers who were here today to honor the unknown soldier, each believing it was "her boy."

She fumbled a little package as she waited—just a wisp of a bouquet of late fall flowers which she wished to mingle with the stately wreaths and pretentious bouquets from richer folk.

"They say he's an unknown soldier," she told another woman in the waiting line. "He's not unknown, I'm sure he's my boy. And, I'm so proud. Just think, the whole country has a part in his funeral. I had prayed and prayed for him," she said.

"I knew he couldn't come home because they didn't know who he was. But a miracle has happened, and he's back." The unknown mother strained her eyes for the signal that would admit her and other visitors to the capitol.

Under the dome of the capitol—a spot reserved only for America's greatest—the body will lie in state until tomorrow morning. It was carried there late yesterday from Admiral Dewey's ship, the Olympia, which brought it from France. Tomorrow the nation will observe Armistice Day by according highest honors to the unknown.

PROGRESSIVE CLUB HELD MEETING, IS WELL ATTENDED

Local Business Men Hear Objects of New Club Organized in Glendale

Merchants and professional men of Glendale were guests Wednesday at a luncheon at the White Inn of the Progressive Business clubs of Los Angeles, Long Beach, and Glendale. This was the first meting of any kind that the newly organized Glendale club has held and was given to become better acquainted with the members from the other cities and with prospective members here in this city. Seventy-five representative business and professional men were present.

Harry K. Stepheson, president of the Long Beach Progressive Business club made the opening address which was followed by a short talk from Dr. W. P. Burke, president of the Los Angeles club. Frank Glendaon, vice-president of the Los Angeles organization, spoke at length and told what the Progressive Business club means to the individual.

A jazz orchestra from Los Angeles furnished music during the dinner and Dorothy Morton gave the banqueters a treat and sang "All By Myself" in an appealing manner all her own. She answered several calls for more.

Dr. Boyer, who has the distinction of being the first Glendale business or professional man to join the organization, told how he appreciated the honor of being the first to sign the membership roll of the Glendale club. Mr. Eastman, of the First Glendale Savings Bank spoke briefly.

The principal speaker of the day was Dr. Patton, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles. He chose as his topic, "Service." He said that the purpose in organizing clubs like the Progressive club was to further the fraternal feeling among the business and professional men of a city. The first thing required by business that can be called successful business, according to Dr. Patton is understanding between the merchant and his customers. Without this understanding there can be no successful business. He said that the chief trouble with his profession, the ministry, was that the members of the ministry talked a language that the average man did not understand. Dr. Patton advised his listeners to get a good start on the right footing in business by establishing complete understanding with their customers. He said that it is possible to overcome a bad start but that it was more advantage to get a good start from the first.

Speaking of "service" he said that during the past 20 years he had noticed the usage of a word that means a great deal to the business, professional and home life of the nation. The word "service" according to Dr. Patton, first came into use among the religious workers of the nation whose sole object in going into foreign lands and teaching the gospel was to give service. Later the word was taken up by the automobile industry and has become the most significant word in the business man's vocabulary today.

He said that man is bound to render equivalent values to the world in service for the privilege of living in the world and that the world owes no man a living and that it is a shame and disgrace for any one to go through life without doing his share for the privilege of having lived in this world.

The greatest service to man and God according to Dr. Patton comes through the conduct of a business and service is always repaid, not always in a monetary sense, but from the knowledge of having, through service, helped some one else. The man who runs an honest and upright business is giving the greatest service.

"The business man to give real service to the world must know his own business absolutely; that is a requirement. All that he knows aside from his business is an accomplishment," said Dr. Patton.

At the close of his talk, Dr. Patton was made an honorary member of the Progressive Business Club of Los Angeles.

WAR DEBT WILL PROBABLY BE CONSIDERED

Specialist Gives Views on Proposal Made to Make Allies Present

NO FEELING IN EUROPE

Far Eastern Question Is Crux of Situation at Present Says Mason

By J. W. T. MASON
(For United Press)

Cancellation of the allied war debts to the United States at this time would have no effect upon the world's political situation. Events may so develop in the future as to permit the United States to get value received in international support for wiping out the ten billion dollars of European indebtedness. But that time has not yet arrived.

If cancellation were made by America under present conditions Europe wolud not feel the effect at all. There would be no financial relief to the allies because they would save nothing. They are not paying interest on the debt or making any effort to reduce the principal. It is not likely they will make payments on any important scale while present distressing financial conditions exist abroad.

There should not be a penny to distribute if the debts were cancelled. Cancellation would be a matter of bookkeeping only. Europe is not being taxed to pay back the debt. Therefore cancellation would mean no remission in taxation and no financial relief under present conditions to any body. There is no reason to believe the aims of the Washington conference would be furthered by cancellation.

The crux of this conference is the Far Eastern situation. America's debtors are not Asiatics but Europeans. America cannot purchase European support under present conditions for her Oriental policies.

Cancellation would not incline the Europeans to the American position. Only community of interest can do that. The time may come, however, when the United States will need material goods and benevolent neutrality in Europe because of Far Eastern belligerency. If that condition arises, the debts will give America an invaluable instrument with which to bargain.

PARTISAN POLITICS MENACING SWORD OVER CONFERENCE

Senator Underwood Scored for Accepting Place in U. S. Delegation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Partisan politics hangs like a menacing sword over the arms limitation conference. "A defeat is the movement," designed for purely partisan purposes, to hamper and embarrass the work of the conference, and in the end to prevent its decisions being made binding, has been undertaken by certain politicians here. This movement finds its motive largely in a desire to be revenged upon the Republican party, for treatment accorded Woodrow Wilson's league of nations plan in the senate. It has already manifested itself against Senator Oscar Underwood, Democratic leader in the senate and a member of the American delegation in the conference.

A certain element in the Democratic party has denounced Underwood to his face and behind his back for accepting President Harding's appointment to the delegation. Four Democratic senators at a recent party conference told Underwood openly they disapproved of his taking a place on the delegation.

HARDING ASKS GIVE AID TO RED CROSS DURING DRIVE

Designates Sunday as Red Cross Day All Over United States

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.— President Harding today asked the American people to give their liberal support to the annual campaign of the Red Cross for relief distribution, which begins Armistice Day and continues for two weeks.

The call of the Red Cross, he said in a statement, "should be regarded as the call of country and humanity." He set next Sunday as Red Cross Sunday and requested the churches to devote that day to emphasizing the "gospel of service." Mr. Harding's statement follows:

"To the American People: As President of the United States and as president of the American Red Cross, I announce that the Red Cross annual roll call will begin Armistice Day, November 11, and continue through Thanksgiving Day, November 24, and I designate Sunday, November 13, as Red Cross Sunday.

"I recommend ministers and priests to stress the gospel of service November 13, and I invite and urge my fellow-citizens to accept the period of the roll call as an occasion for rededication of themselves to the principles and practice of service. The American Red Cross is both the volunteer and semi-official medium through which our people may appropriately express their patriotic and humane desires to render practical assistance to their soldiers and sailors, to their fellow-citizens in civilian life, and to those peoples of other lands who have a human claim on the sympathetic concern of our own people.

"The American Red Cross has kept faith with the principles which gave it birth, and with the obligations laid upon it by Congressional charter—'to act in matters of voluntary relief and in accord with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States and their army and navy'; after a notable war service, it, in conjunction with the veterans' bureau and other activities, stands by our veterans and their families in a period of painful reconstruction, in which, as too many of us have been prone to forget, thousands are in pressing need.

"It is a fundamental principle of the Red Cross not to duplicate but to supplement efforts of governmental and other agencies in the mitigation and alleviation of human suffering, and to supply means thereto where other agencies do not exist. The call of the American Red Cross is the call of country and humanity, and I earnestly urge my fellow-citizens to make that response which satisfies the promptings of a generous people."

DAY OF 10-PIN SHOW PENNIES CHARGED

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio, Nov. 10 —The day of the ten-pin or fifteen-pin show—the favorite of youngsters who put on the circuses in someone's barn or backyard—is past.

Twenty years ago the favorite price of admission to these grand exhibitions of daring and skill was ten to twenty pins, depending upon the number the younster, desiring to witness the show, could obtain from his mother's pincushion without arousing suspicion.

Recently David McBride and Jack Friedel gave a show such as their fathers might have participated in a quarter of a century ago. Instead of having to chase the cow out into the backyards and watch her while the show was in progress in the stable, they gave the performance in Jack's father's garage, while Mr. Friedel was on a trip to Wheeling. The admission was three cents, receipts totaling twenty-one cents.

The feature attraction of the show was a trained chicken that was supposed to squawk when told to do so. Sometimes it failed until a feather was yanked from its tail, whereupon it was sure to produce the necessary squawk for the benefit of the three-cent spectators.

GIRS' VOLLEY TEAM LOST THREE GAMES

Flushed with their pronounced victory over the Glassell Park school team last Friday, the girls forming the volley ball team of the Eagle Rock Central school went over Monday afternoon to play a match with the girls of the Cerritos school. The tide of success turned against them on this occasion and they lost all of the three games that were played.

At the fortnightly meeting today of the Republican Study club, in the Union League building, Los Angeles, Judge Gavin D. Craig, now a resident of Eagle Rock, addressed the club on "War-time Taxation, the Budget System at Work, and Bonding of Foreign Loans."

Another reason why a youth at 21 nowadays often knows more than a man of forty is because he has lived longer.

Mrs. Clara S. Ellis of Townsend avenue attended the governing board meeting of the Southern California Women's Press club on Tuesday, and afterward the "shop talk" session, which is not open to guests. Mrs. Ellis is a director of the club and cofounder with Mrs. Emma S. Marshall of Hollywood.

NEW VAUDEVILLE BILL T.D.&L. THEATR

Tomorrow there is coming to the T. D. and L. theater another great program of Meiklejohn & Dunn vaudeville. On this bill will be found some of the most entertaining acts ever presented on any stage and it is sure to be enjoyed by all who see it.

If there is a headline position on this wonderful show the place really belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Perkins Fisher who are famous the country over for their many laughing successes. This year they are to be seen in "The Half Way House," a sketch that has played the Pantages circuit and has just completed a run at Pantages new theater in Los Angeles. This is the funniest rural sketch ever seen anywhere.

The Dixie Four, those southern entertainers, offer songs and imitations that are rarely heard away from the old southern plantations and their harmony singing has never been surpassed by any quartette.

Three other acts of high class vaudeville will also be seen on this program of headliners and in conjunction, the photoplay "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," will be shown on the screen. In this picture Mary Miles Minter, that dainty star, scores a distinctive hit as a romantic miss who applies unusual tests to her prospective husbands.

Today is the last day of George Fitzmaurice's splendid Paramount production "Experience," with Richard Barthelmess and Marjorie Daw.

Maybe the reason that modern girls don't blush except chemically, is because they don't know of anything to blush about.

NEW YORK IS STILL HEADQUARTERS OF DOPE LEADERS

Clearing House For Country Despite Confiscation of Immense Amount

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Notwithstanding the huge quantities of drugs —cocaine, morphine, heroin and opium—seized within the last six months, New York City still remains the clearing house of the rest of the country, according to Dr. Carleton Simon, special deputy police commissioner.

Dr. Simon declared that while smuggling of drugs through border towns and other ports has diminished it continues into the port of New York from European countries, chiefly Germany.

A "deck" of heroin—one "shot"—sells on the street from $1.50 to $3, depending upon the locality. The deputy commissioner said drug peddlers average $5 per day from each addict. "We have deprived the smugglers of the income from 2700 victims, which means $12,500 daily," said Dr. Simon. "But there are still 20,000 drug addicts at large in this city. They represent to the dealers an income of $100,000 daily. These do not include the "legitimate drug users," addicts who are being treated for the drug habit by their physicians. The narcotic squad does not interfere with the doctors or their patients."

Rich and Poor Alike

Recently a young man of prominent family was among those arrested in a raid upon a "dope joint." He had a quantity of heroin upon him and protested that he had obtained it from his physician. This was found to be the truth, and he was turned over to his family doctor.

"But our object is not to get the drug victims. We want to break up the smuggling ring that is mulcting these poor unfortunates for all they are worth. The federal authorities are working with us and our agents are in Europe watching activities of drug sellers there. We have a complete record of every drug user arrested here with Bertillion photographs and a criminal record. Similar records for over 300 cities in the country are in our possession, and we receive the same data regularly from the police of Canada and France."

The ingenuity of smugglers and drug sellers is illustrated by exhibits in the deputy commissioner's office. A book with the title "The Annual Report of the Board of Health," had a large hole in the center, and in this hole were a dozen decks of heroin. Other books were similarly cut. An embossed Christmas card, beautifully garnished with flowers and a woman's slipper proved to be pure camouflage, as a quantity of heroin was found inside the miniature slipper. A pair of shoes, also on exhibition, were used by a workhouse inmate who sold drugs to other inmates from the shoe linings.

MISS IDA HEFFRON LECTURED PASADENA

Memories of Great Progressive School Was Theme of Her Address

Responding to an urgent request, Miss Ida C. Heffron of 147 Townsend avenue, lectured before the Pasadena section of the National Progressive Educational Association on Monday evening. The section is just being organized and meets in the board of education rooms.

Miss Heffron's subject was "Memories of a Great, Progressive School." She referred to the famous Cook County Normal School in Chicago, where she taught seven years, training the pupils to express their knowledge of their studies through art mediums. The presiding genius of the school was Col. Francis Wayland Parker, who achieved a national renown for the many reforms and improvements in the existing school systems of the day, which he employed with both pupils and teachers in the eighteen years—from 1883 to 1901—of his superintendency of the celebrated school. Many of the changes inaugurated by him are now practiced in the schools all over the country. It has been asserted that Col. Parker will, in the history of the future, rank as the fifth among the great educators of the world, those preceding him being Comerius, Pestalozzi, Froebel, and Horace Mann. He died in 1902.

While serving on the faculty of the Normal school Miss Heffron originated a new method of map drawing which attracted great attention among educators and was named by the National Geographic Society "the chalk modeled map." Surface contours of the earth are drawn in relief, giving a correct idea of every elevation, depression, river, etc., of the region portrayed. Railway companies, real estate dealers, and others wishing to show their land holdings in detail, are now using this kind of map. Its originator never applied for a patent, wishing to contribute its usefulness to the public. At the request of teachers who had received her oral instruction, she published a book on chalk modeling.

After leaving the Normal school Miss Heffron became instructor in the pedagogies of art at the University of Chicago, and later lectured in institutes throughout the country. Attracted by the beautiful scenery, the quiet peacefulness, healthful atmosphere, and altitude of Eagle Rock, she has resided in the home of Mrs. Clara S. Ellis for about two years. She enjoys frequent association with friends of many years' standing who have gathered in Los Angeles and vicinity from various parts of the United States.

One man is awakened by a pat on the back, but it takes a jolt in the neck to awaken others.

Fifteen or twenty years ago the very height of fashion in hats and dresses was as pictured here, worn by Mrs. George Gould, mother of Lady Decies.

JUDGE REGISTERS FLIVVER IN VERSE

WAPAKONETA, O., Nov. 10.—Justice of the Peace R. G. Herman owns a flivver, and under a new law he is required to register it. He thus describes his bus in rhyme:

"The radiator leaks, the body squeaks; there's a hole in the top where the rain comes through.

"The windshield is broke, one wheel lost a spoke, but it hangs together, so 'twill have to do.

"The tail-light is busted, the footboards are rusted; the fenders are loose and rattle like sin;

"The back has been smashed, the tires are gashed, but it's a darn good car for the shape it's in."

No sensitive man ever has any other desire than to throttle the woman who publicly assumes a proprietary air over him.

BOOTLEGGERS EAST PLANNED MURDER OF DRY AGENTS

Department Agents Now Investigate Deaths of Dry Agents Months Ago

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Evidence that a ring of bootleggers plotted the death of dry agents who have been strangely murdered in New York and vicinity during the last few months, is in the hands of department of justice agents, it was learned today. One of the agents whose death is under investigation was James McGuiness, a nephew of Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary of former President Wilson. McGuiness was found dead near Bayonne, N. J., nearly a year ago and a suicide verdict was given. The same verdict was rendered in other cases where agents were found shot or hanged. There is reason to believe that the men have been the victims of carefully laid plans of a murder ring, according to Robert P. McCormick, assistant United States district attorney.

WOULD PUNISH ALL WIFE DESERTERS

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Minnie Barton, probation officer of this city, suggests an effective remedy for wife deserters. It is a revival of the whipping post.

"I know there are many who regard a whipping post as a barbarous punishment, but at the same time it must be remembered it has produced amazing results in Delaware," said Mrs. Barton. "Statistics show there has been only one wife deserter in the little Eastern state in a decade."

The probation officer pointed out that wife desertion has become a very common crime in Southern California in the last two years. She asserted that other evils are also the result of this offense and declared nothing will check it except drastic legislation.

PREACHER SHOOTS THIEF

BEAUMONT, Tex., Nov. 10.—For the second time in as many months a chicken thief invaded the premises of the Rev. W. R. Brown, of Orange, near here. As in the first instance, Dr. Brown attacked and killed the intruder—a fat and sassy 'possum.

Too many of them are fat and forty without being fair.

DO IT NOW!

Build that house now; construct that highway at once; build that school, that church, repair that broken pavement; build that garage, and even that chicken coop, now—not tomorrow.

Go ahead with your plans; speed the nation on the road to full employment and thus hasten the day of individual and national prosperity and safety.

Preach this everywhere; put it into effect, and remember, business men of Glendale, men of "big business" and men of "little business," that there is something in this infinitely higher and more important than the small amount of money involved which you think you could save by waiting.

Some men put off the day of salvation, expecting to attend to it on their death bed, but not many ever succeed in doing it at that hour. "Do it now, and do it with all your might," should be the motto of every man in Glendale who expects to do any construction work in the near future. "Do it now," and thus do your part toward individual and national business salvation—and even more.

Procrastination is more than the thief of time; it is the murderer of opportunity.

Glendale Real Estate

is coming into its own. It's up to you to co-operate in carrying out the above wise and timely admonition by ACTING NOW.

GLENDALE MEMBERS COMPANY STAGED BIG DESERT PLAY

John Cotton Takes Part and Clarence Ralston Assumes Role of Neco

Glendale should feel some pride in the fact that it was represented in the company of actors who staged the first desert play ever given, a performance which took place November 5 and 6 at the foot of San Jacinto mountain, a mile from Palm Springs.

The play, called "Fire," written by Mary Austin, which was then produced under the direction of Garnett Holmes, is founded upon Indian legends relative to the coming of the element fire to mankind. Driven by the cold of winter nights the tribes seek to asquire the fire burning in the mountain wilderness. "Evind," the leading character in the play, alone dares to draw near, but fails. His companion, Coyote, snatches a burning brand. Evind demands admittance to the tribe and the hand of one of the maids. His request is granted on condition that he separate from his brute friend, Coyote.. Eventually he finds himself unable to live without his old companion and he and his wife, Laela, are driven out to share the desert solitude of Coyote.

John Cotton of this city had a part in the pageant and Clarence Ralston, a graduate of Glendale high and former resident of our city, took the role of Neco, a great friend of Evind. It proved a very beautiful spectacle which is to become an annual event and pilgrimage. This year it was witnessed by about one thousand spectators.

EDUCATION WEEK'S PROGRAM PLANNED

Minor Details Yet To Be Given Attention for Week December 4 to 10

Not all the details of plans for the observance of "American Education Week," December 4 to 10, by the schools of Glendale, have been worked out, but Superintendent Richardson D. White states that the grade and high schools are uniting in the celebration, which is to impress upon the residents of our city the importance of the public school system of the United States.

At their meeting Tuesday night the members of the Board of Education voted to ask the local papers to give the schools a page a day for that week, the page to be edited and the matter furnished by the schools.

One of the projects under consideration is a parade of automobiles filled with school children, to include every child in the city, or 4500 pupils.

The schools will keep open house that week and invite parents and friends to visit them, certain days being designated for the visiting days of each school.

The celebration will also include a big mass meeting to be addressed by the best speakers to be secured in Southern California.

HENRI SEEMS BORED AS TRIAL PROCEEDS

French Alleges Bluebeard Tells of Mme. Cuchet Going to England

VERSAILLES, Nov. 10. — Henri Landru, a bored Don Juan today explained the details of the first of his 285 love affairs, when court opened for the third day of his trial on the charge of murdering ten of his fiancees and one of their sons. Change in the program resulted in Judge Gilbert continuing his examination of the witness instead of permitting the prosecution to produce some of its 130 witnesses, as scheduled.

The judge asked Landru regarding the death of his first fiancee, Madame Cuchet, a widow, and her son Andre, 17. The Cuchet's furniture, including several mattresses and a clock were piled in the court room. It was alleged Landru tried to sell the objects after the woman and boy disappeared from the villa she had rented at Vernouilet.

Landru with an air of resigned patience said he had met Madame Cuchet through her son who was working as his apprentice in a garage. He went on to tell how the Cuchet's suddenly left for England, leaving the furniture for him to dispose of. Landru denied ever having any improper relations with Mme. Cuchet. Judge Gilbert cited the depositions of her former neighbors in refutation of this. The defendant also denied having advised her to abandon her relatives, adding that "one never advises a woman over forty."

SHOEMAKER KICKS ROLL OF $5100 AWAY

BAYONNE, N. J., Nov. 9.—Frank Sivelli, cobbler, started to work on a pair of shoes brought in for repairs by a Polish woman. A wad of green paper rolled out of one. The cobbler kicked the paper out of the way into a pile of scraps of leather. A few minutes later, looking for a stripping in the rubbish, he noticed the green wad again. Examination disclosed that it was money. There was $5,100 in $100 bills. Sivelli was just starting to look for his customer when the woman came rushing in with her husband. He explained that he had been using his shoe for a bank. He gave Sivelli $10 and left vowing that hereafter he would patronize a more institutional bank.

Mrs. Schulte of Burchett street had as callers Monday afternoon Mrs. Eugenia Gilliland and Mrs. C. B. Guettard.

Rector Uses Light System To Sway His Congregation

Dr. Norman W. Guthrie tells how color effects influence minds of worshippers down in New York slum district.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—In a very old church, its modern rector, a protagonist of the beautiful, is making use of an interesting device for the stimulation of certain moods in his audience.

Down at old St. Mark's-in-the-Bowery, ancient edifice that has stood since 1795 staunchly amid the changes of time, the Rev. Norman William Guthrie, rector of that place of worship, explained the purposes and uses of a novel lighting system recently installed there.

The colors of the spectrum are being used to produce emotional states in those who come to pray and to listen.

From the old vaulted ceiling hang huge lanterns, which cast ever-changing colors upon the audience. From a high point over the altar—where is placed a new altar plaque, of reredos in high relief, the work of Sculptor Chester Beach—shines down a stream of pure white light. And again, when the rector mounts his pulpit, light is concentrated on this spot, cast from devices in the balcony.

Rainbow shades over religious services! How strange and new it sounds! But, upon consideration, is it as radical and unheard-of a step as one might think?

Inducing Meditation

Dr. Guthrie declares it is quite the opposite; that it is an ancient and reputable means of inducing meditation, austere contemplation and fervor.

"There are two reasons for this apparent innovation," he said.

We walked through the church, half dim at noonday. Workingmen were busy all about at the altar, where the new plaque by Beach has been installed, applying gold leaf and looking over the new lighting apparatus. Although daylight conflicted somewhat with the effect of the electric lights, still it was possible to see just what changes would take place when various colors were sent out from the huge hanging lamps.

"Our first reason," continued the rector, "is a psychological one. It is a fact that the earliest emotional reaction a child experiences is brought on by color. Primitive, deep down in the system, there is that earliest of all responses.

"Try a child with colors—blue, purple, rose or gold—and you will find a fundamental feeling for these hues. Objects, friends or foes—these do not matter to a child who reaches out toward colors.

"Now we come to the effects of light. It cheers or depresses, or it may excite or bring peace.

"Since light produces moods, it is therefore, my object to bring all people together in one certain mood for the reception of moral and religious power.

It would be foolish not to avail ourselves of this modern means of arousing and supporting our religious emotions."

Sunlight and Moonlight Tones

Someone had turned on the lights that now were letting down cool green and blue rays. The effect was peaceful and rather austere.

"Our object is to saturate, to swamp the atmosphere with what I call 'moodal' tones," said Dr. Guthrie. "There is to be merely the suggestion of mood and not the lighting up of objects as such. This blue and green effect brings a feeling of moonlight over the congregation."

The light had changed. A mellow glow spread over the interior. Crimson, amber, then violet lights were diffused through the lamps above.

"These warmer hues produce a feeling of sunlight," Dr. Guthrie said. "The sun was worshipped in early religions; in fact, by all the Aryan races, not alone the Persians, as we are so apt to believe. The dawn was worshipped, too, and the sunset regarded as the place of the departed.

"We are only in the experimental stage. We have a fine apparatus, which we scarcely know how to use properly yet.

"But in our church it must be used reverently and temperately. The entire effect must be reserved. Otherwise it would create too intense an atmosphere and our purpose would be defeated.

"All the lights are turned on and out gradually. All consciousness is slowly let go in quiet abandonment, to envisage the glorious. The congregation reads its hymns by daylight or strong white light. Then this is turned off, and during the address the moonlight or cool colors are switched on the audience and a stronger light over the pulpit."

Architect Aids in Effects.

Some time ago Dr. Guthrie confided his scheme to try color effects in church to Claude Bragdon, the architect. It made a strong appeal and the architect has worked enthusiastically on the plans which have culminated in the present device.

"Mr. Bragdon's beautifully designed lanterns do not conflict. In design they are agreeable to consider, but they do not demand attention," Dr. Guthrie stated.

"The light is diffused not through plain glass, but by means of lenses, and finally filtered through opalescent glass. Though we use color in the church it is not thrown on the altar, which is pure gold and on which pure white light shines.

"This new device has been compared falsely with a theatrical type of venture. There is but one point of analogy between the stage and our lighting—that in both theater and church attention must be centered. All minds must be carried thither, either to stage or altar.

"The theater, on the other hand, is selling goods and must create a magical mise-en-scene.

"I have never preached sensational sermons or tried to sway people with rhetoric. These certain moods must be secured in a way apart from anything that is 'said.'

"New things sometimes are strangely received. In Scotland when organ music was introduced in churches they complained of 'devil's' whistles in boxes. Now, some of the churches that were most opposed to music have placed their organs at the front of the churches. We put ours at the back. I think, however, that music, both Occidental and Oriental, has gone as far as it can go and that for advancement we must turn to color."

HOLD CIRCUS WILD ANIMAL TRAINER

EVERETT, Wash., Nov. 9.—A small, powder-rimmed puncture in the back of Gus Danielson, wealthy lumberman, has caused the arrest of Mrs. Bertha Wilkes, elephant trainer with the Sells-Floto circus, on a charge of first degree murder. Prosecuting Attorney Stiger will contend that the bullet should not have penetrated Danielson's back had the revolver been in his own hands. Danielson was killed Sunday night in a scuffle with Mrs. Wilkes, whom he wished to marry. The woman contended that Danielson had been drinking and that the pistol with which he had been threatening her was accidentally discharged.

THIRTEEN WOMEN FOR ARBUCKLE JURY

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Thirteen women today were served with summons to appear in superior court here next Monday as prospective members of the jury before which Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle will be tried. Both the state and defense were engaged in elaborate preparations for the trial. Arbuckle's attorneys secured 27 subpoenas for witnesses to testify in the big comedian's defense, 13 of whom were immediately sent to Los Angeles for service. It was understood that one of the subpoenas was the aunt of Virginia Rappe, with whom Miss Rappe lived. Arbuckle's lawyers believe she can give valuable evidence on their side of the case.

NIGHT PHONE MAY BE INAUGURATED

Citizens Tujunga Making Effort to Get Protection From Phone Company

TUJUNGA, Nov. 10.—A committee has been appointed by the Business Men's Association to make a determined effort to secure all night telephone service for Tujunga and if necessary to take the matter up with the railroad commission. A plan has been offered for the installation of an all-night service that would apparently be inexpensive to the telephone company.

It is advocated that a connection be made with the stage company garage where a night man is regularly employed and could for a small sum be employed to answer night calls. The need of a night telephone service has been more keenly felt during the past few weeks as there were several deaths and serious illnesses that occured during the night.

It is reported that petitions calling for the direct delivery of mail to the Tujunga, La Crescenta and Sunland postoffices have been received at the department and that postal inspectors will make a favorable report on the matter.

A. J. Richardson has made application to establish a branch of the U. X. Railway Express in Tujunga. In the event that this application is granted business will receive an added impetus.

Mr. and Mrs. William McNeil, who are leaving to make their home in San Diego, were pleasantly surprised Tuesday night when a number of friends banded together and gave them a surprise party.

A "Trip Around the World" is being planned by the P. T. A. of Tujunga. Various houses in the city will be decorated to represent the various nations and dishes appropriate to the nation represented will be served. Mrs. B. N. Reynolds will represent Mexico, Mrs. L. E. Halferty, Japan; Mrs. W. H. Wieman, Italy; Mrs. J. E. Carr, France, and Mrs. G. C. Buck, America. The travelers will go from house to house in groups.

Major P. J. Blake and his wife are rejoicing over the birth of a fine baby that was born to them on Monday morning.

'ME AND SARAH' WILL RUN HOOSIER CITY

Lew Shank and Wife Win in Mayoralty Race in Indianapolis Again

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 10.—"Me and Sarah" were on top of the political heap in Indianapolis today. Lew Shank, auctioneer, former vaudeville performer and once a potato selling mayor of Indianapolis, was on that job again today, having been elected by a majority of 23,000.

"Look out, you undesirables," Shank warned in a speech to the crowd milling around his home here today. "Me and Sarah are going to make Indianapolis a clean place to live. We are mayor of Indianapolis." Shank gives most of the credit for his success to his wife, Sarah.

EDITORIALS
BY THE PEOPLE

Editor Glendale Daily Press:—In the paper for November 7 I read an article requesting people with autos who expect to participate in the Armistice Day parade not to drape the flag on their machines. Why are the merchants on Brand Boulevard permitted to drape flags on their stores if it is against the regulations concerning the flying of the national emblem? If bunting may be used on the machines, why can it not be used for decorating the store fronts?

The flag may look pretty that way, but it does not show the proper respect due the flag. Very truly yours,

FREDERICA BROWNE.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases. —Adv.

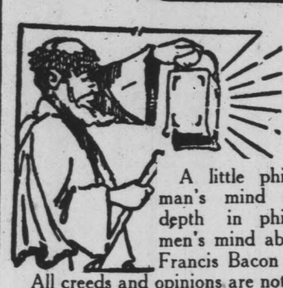
Truths in Epigram



A mere madness, to live like a wretch and die rich. — Richard Burton (1576-1640).

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's mind about to religion.—Francis Bacon (1561-1626).

All creeds and opinions are nothing but the mere result of chance and temperament.—Joseph H. Shorthouse (1834-1903).

LETTING RUSSIA ALONE

H. G. Wells is quoted as replying to a question as to what Russia needs: "To be let alone, allowed to recover."

Wells is reckoned among the foremost thinkers of the time. He has a breadth and keenness of vision such as is granted to few even of high intelligence and erudition.

It is possible that the answer as printed received color from the interviewer, who was Arthur Brisbane. One of Brisbane's obsessions is his belief in the nobility of Lenine, and the potency of bolshevism. If Wells made the remark attributed to him by Lenine's admirer, then he was caught with his judgment napping.

Because Russia has been so long let alone, its industries are dead, its fields barren, its millions starving, its capital dissipated. Had the isolation not been intruded upon by the laden hand of charity, the suffering would be greater. The spectacle of famished Russia stirs the sympathy of the world. The world cannot close its eyes to misery, or withhold aid from the perishing. So Russia just now is not being let alone.

In another way Russia renders impossible a policy that would let it alone. Not only has it demonstrated its utter incapacity to care for itself, wandering helpless and raging as a blinded giant, but it refuses to let the world alone. Not enough for Russia that it should be a thing apart from other peoples, working out its own destiny. It reaches afar seeking to despoil civilization of happiness. It tries to spread everywhere the doctrine of discontent. Its emissaries carry poisonous doctrines into lands that are fairly prosperous and reasonably satisfied. Its ambition is to bring about general revolution, always termed "bloody" by its advocates.

Wisdom suggests that a snarling dog chained to a post be let alone. With the dog loosed, the chance to take this attitude towards it becomes remote and perhaps wholly impracticable.

If Russia could be induced to let the world alone, it may be that the world would harden its heart, and permit the soviet system to perish in its own ruins. But it cannot present to an avowed enemy of civilization an aspect of indifference.

All that any offender against the law asks is to be let alone. In frequent cases the favor has to be withheld.

JAPAN'S TREATY

There is no assurance that the assassination of Premier Hara of Japan was designed to have any bearing upon the disarmament conference. On the contrary, such bearing as it may have, is likely to be quite apart from any thought that inspired the arm of the slayer.

To the student of events in the Orient, confirmation of the report that Hara was killed by a Korean would be explanation enough.

The Koreans are racially proud and their patriotism is intense. They have resented their subjugation by Japan bitterly. The exploit of the Japanese in respect of Korea was utterly without excuse, save belief in the theory that to the strong belongs anything they are able to take.

In the Russo-Japan war Korea was found to be a convenient base. It thus was entered and utilized by the military arm of Japan. When the war ended, the alien armed force was still there. It is there today, holding the Koreans in hated serfdom, and in the opinion of the natives, as alien as ever.

The Koreans are unable to wage war in the ordinary manner. They have elected to wage it as individuals. If they may not cause the undoing if the wrong, at least they may express their opinion of it, and write it in red.

Years ago a white man who had been suspected of helping betray Korea to the Japanese, was followed to this country by two Koreans. They found him in San Francisco, and there they killed him. They claimed justification for their act as being an act of war.

Such was the spirit of Korea then. It appears not to have changed.

MANY DELICATE QUESTIONS

As the day of the disarmament conference draws nearer, realization quickens that many difficult and delicate questions will come before the assembly. The one viewed with keenest apprehension relates to the Pacific. This does not mean the domination of the ocean. It broadens to include the whole Oriental problem.

Japan is not alone to blame for its present attitude towards China. There has for many years been recognized among the powers the doctrine that China was not able to stand alone. Its weakness drew to it a peculiar sort of support. Nations that dealt with China elected to guard their own interests there, and incidentally to overshadow the native authority.

It was due to this policy that Germany ruled Shantung. No nation had protested against the presence of Germany there. None could have done so consistently, unless, indeed, the United States. Had any pointed to Germany and said "You're an interloper," Germany could have responded "You're another." Finally the war, with Japan the instrumentality, did oust Germany from Shantung, leaving China no whit better off than before, for the Japanese who assumed proprietorship were more objectionable to the native pride than the Germans had been. The United States government became implicated by giving consent, however reluctantly.

Now Japan is expecting to be asked to curtail its plans in the Orient, and to drop its schemes of conquest. And if Japan shall refuse, what then?

THE LARGER VISION

Marshal Foch of France says that his vision has been enlarged by his visit to this country. He was much impressed by the "dignity and strength of soul" he observed in the marching of his old comrades, as he called the American soldiers he reviewed at Kansas City. "I have found it necessary to view things on a bigger scale," he said.

Doubtless the war had a similar effect on millions. They came out of it with vision enlarged. They realized a world about them as a part of the world in which they lived. They became as brothers to men of different races. The new bond stretches across the seas.

It would be singular indeed if men who had fought shoulder to shoulder for common cause, their victory won, should go their separate ways, unheeding each, the future welfare of the others. It does not seem that such a course could be natural. On the contrary, an abiding fraternity might be expected to spring from perils shared by all; a community of spirit to rise out of the battle cloud.

There are racial differences not to be overcome. Perhaps the effort to overcome them would be unwise. But the great nations that defended the cause of liberty, and in doing so, saved civilization from wreck, demonstrated by the operation the power for good that was constituted of their temporary union.

The larger vision beholds a world at peace. It reaches forward to the time when none shall feel the impulse to be full panoplied for war.

CHIEF JUSTICE ANGELLOTTI

Chief Justice Angellotti of the state supreme court has resigned. He has had an honorable career on the bench. Seven of his nineteen years with the highest tribunal were as chief justice. Five years remain of the term to which he had been elected. His reputation is without stain, his place secure, and yet he chooses to re-enter private practice.

Statements that judges are not sufficiently paid are often heard. Doubtless this is true in many instances. In others, suspicion arises that they are over-paid, which is but another way of saying that they should not have been elevated to the bench at any figure. In the main, however, judicial salary is too small. The able men who receive it are doing so at a sacrifice. They have to decide cases involving vast sums, and when they are aware that lawyers on each side are receiving as fee more than the yearly income of a judge. In probate cases a judge in line of duty names the remuneration a lawyer is to receive for handing an estate. It may happen that this amount is perfectly just, and yet in itself an actual fortune.

In the legal profession are large prizes. Lawyers of the first rank command enormous fees. Their services may be far beyond the reach of the poor litigant. It would not be desirable, of course, to pay judges on the basis that these few leaders of the bar are recompensed. It would, however, be fair to pay them enough so that compared with the average income of the attorneys practicing before them, their own incomes would not seem meager.

Judge Angellotti doubtless could have continued on the supreme bench for the full course of his professional life. The people of California hold him in high esteem, and hope that in the field he has selected he may meet with a full measure of success.

VICTORIA

By DR. FRANK CRANE

One of the most diverting books I have read this long time is Lytton Strachey's "Queen Victoria."

One beauty of the volume is that its title indicates exactly its contents, which is not always the case with books, and it is not pleasant to pick up one thinking it is a biography and find you are in for a homily.

A good many criticisms in fact remind us of the witty remark of some Frenchman who said that the critic's method usually was: "Apropos of Shakespeare and his art, I will proceed to talk about myself."

Strachey's pages really give us Victoria. And reading them one cannot help feeling sorry for the old girl, and for all whom fate condemns to the barren loneliness of royalty.

For instance, we are given on page 97 a glimpse of a royal evening party.

After dinner the company reassembled in the drawing room, for at her majesty's affairs gentlemen were denied even the sole remaining refuge of getting drunk.

The queen proceeded to swap platitudes with those present, and the evening moved forward in arid and deadly elegance.

Here is her conversation with Mr. Greville, clerk of the privy council:

"Have you been riding today, Mr. Greville?" asked the queen. "No, Madam, I have not," replied Mr. Greville. "It was a fine day," continued the queen. "Yes, Madam, a very fine day," said Mr. Greville. "It was rather cold, though," said the queen. "It was rather cold, Madam," said Mr. Greville.

"Your sister, Lady Frances Egerton, rides, I think, doesn't she?" said the queen. "She does ride sometimes, Madam," said Mr. Grville.

There was a pause, after which Mr. Greville ventured to take the lead, though he did not venture to change the subject. "Has your majesty been riding today?" asked Mr. Greville. "Oh, yes, a very long ride," answered the queen with animation. "Has your majesty got a nice horse," said Mr. Greville. "Oh, a very nice horse," said the queen.

It was over. Her majesty gave a smile and an inclination of the head, Mr. Greville a profound bow, and the next conversation began with the next gentleman. When all the guests had been disposed of, the Duchess of Kent sat down to her whist, while everybody else was ranged about the round table. Lord Melbourne sat beside the queen, and talked pertinaciously—very often apropos to the contents of one of the large albums of engravings with which the round table was covered—until it was half-past eleven and time to go to bed.

May heaven be blessed that we were not born to the purple, and have nothing worse to endure than receptions of college presidents and Presbyterian church sociables!

If there's anything along Main street more asphyxiating than this royal chapter of horrors we have never found it.

THE LISTENING POST

That was a breeding place for mosquitoes.
As swamps are.
Unless drained or oiled.
For we have come to know that mosquitoes breed in stagnant water.
Or still water.

* * *

Which scums over with green slime and grows full of animalculae.
Where dashing and flowing water does not lend itself to contamination.

* * *

The mountain stream is clear, bubbling and sparkling.
Because it is in motion.
It has action.
Down from rock to rock and cascade to cascade it dashes.
And affords no breeding place for mosquitoes or the hatching of other larvae.

* * *

Just as with your spirit and mine.
Action and motion and progress keep it from becoming stagnant.
The waters of our souls are alive.
They sparkle and bubble and effervesce.
Constant inflowing and outflowing make a stream of thinking and doing and being that is alive.

* * *

So we started with a swamp and a mosquito and reached an allegory.
And will now go back to the mosquito.
And to the swamp.
For the purpose of this Listening Post.
And to make a lesson of the man who sat there.

* * *

He was covered with mosquitoes.
His hands and legs and face and neck were full of them.
Biting and bloodsucking and stinging.
And still the man did not move.
Except when the discomfort was greater than he could stand.

* * *

Then he brushed the mosquitoes gently away.
And they rose in a cloud and soon settled again.
And went to bloodsucking.
Which is the business of a mosquito.
Human or insect.
The human race has counterparts for all of the animal and insect types.
It has its gnats and flies and mosquitoes and grubs and the like.
Just as it has its higher and splendid types.
And there are human bloodsuckers as there are insect bloodsuckers.
There are those who thrive and grow fat upon the labor and blood of others.

* * *

And while the man sat by the swamp a philosopher came that way.
And looked with philosophical surprise at the spectacle of the man covered with mosquitoes.
And the listless effort of the man to rid himself of the pests.
And he asked the man why.
A philosopher is always asking why.
Which is the only way he can learn.

* * *

And the man looked up languidly and said:
"I am a kind man. I would not harm one living creature.
"If the mosquitoes choose to get sustenance from me, why should I prevent it?
"I cannot kill them. It would not be kind."

* * *

And he sat there and let the mosquitoes feast.
And the philosopher wondered.
And finally he said:
"Of what value is a mosquito that it should feast on you, who are of some value if you choose?"
And the man said:
"I don't know. But I am a kind and a merciful man and I could not interfere with the plan of life. Evidently these mosquitoes are here for some purpose."

* * *

And the philosopher said:
"Surely they are. They are here for the purpose of proving what a fool a man can be and still be alive."
And the man said:
"Should I kill a mosquito?"
And the philosopher said:
"It is not important whether you do or not, but some of us are going to drain the swamp and oil it and kill all the mosquitoes."

* * *

And the philosopher went on leaving the merciful man wondering why anyone should interfere with nature.
And the swamp was eventually drained and many persons spared bites and disease and perhaps death.
For the world advances in spite of the folly of the unthinking.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Old and Young—By Charles Kingsley (1819-1875)

When all the world is young, lad,
And all the trees are green;
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad,
And round the world away;
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every dog his day.

When all the world is old, lad,
And all the trees are brown;
And all the sport is stale, lad,
And all the wheels run down:
Creep home, and take your place there,
The spent and maimed among:
God grant you find one face there
You loved when all was young.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

WOULD BUY THE BERMUDAS

[Chicago Tribune]

While the Bahama and other British West Indian islands have commercial and climatic justification as a part of the British empire, the Bermuda islands have not.

The Bermudas are small coral reefs which cannot even support human life without artificially collecting the rainfall into cisterns. Such trade as they have is with the United States.

The Bermudas form a powerful naval base on the west side of the Atlantic ocean, a naval base with relation only to the United States.

They form a base on which to defend the American coast or from which to attack it and blockade it. They should be American, for they have no other honest reason for existence. The United States should buy them with some of the money owed by Great Britain.

FRANCE DISARMING

[New York Tribune]

At the coming conference France is certain to bring up again her demand for adequate guaranties against a new German invasion. Lacking a fair hearing for this policy, she will surely oppose any cut in land armament. So long as she has not the support of America and England she cannot agree to weaken her defenses to such an extent that she will be at the mercy of Germany.

Not only does France deserve no censure for such a policy, but she should receive credit for a sincere effort to reduce her armaments to the greatest possible extent consistent with her safety. From reliable sources it is learned that her army appropriations for the year 1922 are 20 per cent less than those for 1921. It is proposed to cut her Moroccan forces from 90,000 to 60,000 men, and the eastern contingent from 77,000 to 35,000. Supplementary leave without pay is also to be granted, and it is planned to liberate the oldest classes earlier than usual. All of these cuts will effect economies.

These are steps in the limitation of land armaments. But so long as Germany threatens France and France cannot rely on England and America for help, self-preservation will forbid her going much further. Probably none of the allies, so far as the economic situation is concerned, is in greater need of big budget reductions. France is quite aware of this. But rather than run the risk of losing the peace, she must either have help or else be so strong that she can help herself. Is it any wonder, therefore, that she wishes assurances that Germany will be forced to behave? Is it any wonder that she looks unkindly on any attempt to make her reduce her armaments unless she receives adequate guaranties that she shall not be exposed to a repetition of the horrors of 1914?

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA M. STEWART

There's a lesson for us amid the country roads. Very seldom do they go straight to their goal. They curve gently around the danger spots, the steepness of the hills.

It's true that the modern idea is rather to sacrifice all else to speed and direction. But in so doing wrecks are scattered about the way. There's so little time for caution and leisurly planning.

There's many a danger spot in our relations with others—a steep hill here, a morass there. Then why not go around these? It's very difficult to make a wreck out of the road as good as new. It's correspondingly difficult to perfectly repair hurt feelings and replace bitter memories. It isn't always necessary to notice and to resent. A large hearted overlooking is better than a quick retort. The latter never forms an incentive to better understanding.

Some of us seem to think that tact and deceit are synonymous. But they're not. Tact means kindness of heart and a reluctance to wound. It's well worth cultivating.

Country roads, too, are never crowded. There's time to observe all the beauty of the way. One can alight and pick flowers by the roadside. Too many of us go through life as if it were a race course. No time to see anything but work and excitement. No time to enjoy the little home happinesses, or to cultivate lasting friendships.

Try the country roads occasionally. They can both charm and teach.

Comment on the News

By HENRY JAMES

A young husband is now before the courts in quest of an annulment of his marriage. It appears from his story that he was married at eighteen to a girl of sixteen. Experts, who passed upon the mental condition of the girl while she was in a place of detention, say her intellectual development, and limit, is that of a child of less than ten. The mental condition of the boy seems not to have been determined. Possibly it would be a little higher, say, a full ten years.

These two youngsters met in a city park. Until that instant neither had known of the existence of the other. They went to Santa Ana, and were married the same day. Of course, they both lied about their ages, and, of course, each official with whom they had to come in contact, knew they were lying. The magistrate who tied the knot also must have been aware.

To permit a marriage of this character is not ouly foolish, but it is a disgrace to society. While there seems to be no method to prevent the unfit from entering the state of matrimony, at least they should be compelled to declare their intention. In that way the matter could be brought to the notice of parents or guardians, or the management of retreats for the feeble-minded. Then such brats as the pair in question could be rescued and spanked, or locked up as circumstances might suggest.

In a recent raid upon hawkers of forbidden drugs $30,000 worth of the dope was captured. Also one of the owners of the deadly stuff. If justice were to be applied sternly, the captor would be required to eat the contraband. He couldn't eat all of it, of course, but he could swallow a reformatory dose without greatly reducing the stock.

Robbery of the mails is getting so common and is conducted on so large a scale, that it begins to constitute a financial problem. A telegram from Kansas City tells of one robbery in which the bandit got $350,000. A loss of this magnitude is disturbing.

In this instance there was a lone bandit. He scared seven mail clerks into comotose condition. The outlook is rather hopeless when among such a bevy of clerks there was not at least one of reasonable nerve and the normal fighting instinct. Perhaps Mr. Hays will have to cause employees to undergo the gland operation, selecting the glands of belligerent goats.

An Iowa banker lost his fortune by speculating in farm lands. In the end his capital seemed to consist of an automatic pistol, which he used with effect on himself.

Everybody knew, and financiers widely proclaimed the fact, that farm lands were going to a level that not only was illogical, but that could not be maintaned. Land that was fairly worth $100 an acre went by bounds to $500. There was not a remote possibility that it could be made to yield returns on the investment. The final buyer at the fancy figure was purchasing the certainty of ruin.

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL AT FIRST METHODIST

Last night marked the beginning of the school of religious education at the First Methodist Church to be held every Wednesday evening. There will be four different classes each Wednesday starting at 7.15. At 8 p. m. the classes assembled in the main auditorium for Bible study. Following that Rev. G. Bromley Oxnam, pastor of the Church of All Nations in Los Angeles spoke. Rev. Oxnam has traveled in Russia and has first hand information regarding conditions there. He has made investigation into labor conditions there and gave information regarding them in a very interesting manner.

At the Sunday services, there will be a place in the church for the whole family. A nursery for the babies, kindergarten for the tiny tots and those over twelve may remain in church with their parents. This will help many families who might otherwise remain at home.

DR. E. C. BEACH TELLS OF CHILDREN'S DEFECTS

The Parent-Teacher Federation, which held its customary monthly meting Wednesday afternoon at the Intermediate school, departed from its usual custom by having a speaker, Dr. Edward C. eBach, who talked on the normal growth of children and the basic causes of physical defects.

Before the address, there was a business session, at which the treasurer reported $148.65 of financial resourses. Bills totalling about $12.50 were presented and ordered paid.

Mrs. Winona Crowford was called upon to explain an appeal which is being sent out for contributions to the fund for disabled veterans with a request that 1 cent be collected from all the children in the city schools. She expressed the sympathy which she and other members of the association felt for the cause but also the reluctance to increase the burden upon teachers by asking them to collect this money. She therefore proposed as a substitute measure that the association appropriate from its treasury an amount equal to the cent per child asked for, and the treasurer was instructed to draw a check for the estimated amount, which would be in the neighborhood of $28.

The association was addressed by Superintendent R. D. White relative to the celebration of American Education Week and voted its endorsement of the plans outlined.

Mrs. John Robert White, president, told of a resolution passed by the district association recommending members to address letters to the Los Angeles daily newspapers asking them not to elaborate on the details of crime in their accounts of trials and arrests. A motion by Mrs. W. B. Alexander, amended by Mrs. Dotson, prevailed, instructing Mrs. White, as federation president, to prepare such a letter to be sent to all the dailies of Los Angeles, the letters to be countersigned by the presidents and secretaries of the individual parent-teacher associations of Glendale.

Mrs. Crawford also reported as chairman of patriotism, relative to representation in the Armistice Day parade, stating that the floats representing the schools and the machines representing the parent-teacher associations had been assigned to division 1 and would report north of Harvard on Central avenue, Friday morning at 9:30.

Mrs. Leslie Tronsier was elected to fill a vacancy in the secretaryship. Mrs. Peter Diederich was made chairman of "Thrift," and announcement was made that the next meeting, December 14, would be held at the home of the President, Mrs. John Robert White.

Dr. Beach was then introduced by his personal friend, Mrs. Charles A. Stockbridge. He stated that he had been a student of child life for 28 years, 14 of those years as a supervisor of physical training and hygiene in Los Angeles city schools. He said he had made about 80,000 examinations of children and had drawn from them the conclusion that the perfect human being, so far as contour, growth and development are concerned, is very rare; that he had learned to accept slight deviations as a more or less normal condition.

This lack of perfection he attributed in great part to artificial conditions of modern life in cities and towns where the normal activities of a few generations ago are cut off and artificial ones have had to be substituted; also to the improper feeding of children with commercialized "prepared" foods which are not easily assimilable or fail to supply the nourishment demanded by the growing child. The lack of an abundance of whole milk in the diet of children was dwelt upon at some length and the speaker submitted the results of a survey of children in the Los Angeles schools which showed that 42 per cent of the children were not getting milk and 26 per cent only a glass of milk a day. An analysis of the situation demonstrated that the children getting milk were taller and more vigorous, and averaged higher in their grades, on their athletic teams and in orchestral and other special lines than the children who lacked milk. They had more initiative. Over half the children in the Los Angeles schools are below normal, he declared. This handicap, measured in time, represents, he said 20,000 years lost and this economic loss, measured in dollars, represents over $3,000,000. Most of it is the result of malnutrition.

He made many interesting statements which should have been heard by a much larger group of mothers because they dwelt with the fundamentals in the physical life of children. The prime causes leading to crippled children were dwelt upon and the corrective work undertaken by the California Hospital for Crippled Children, the Orthopedic Institute and other institutions for salvaging human waste, were discussed appreciatively.

CETRAL AVENUE P.-T. A. MEETING THURSDAY

The Central Avenue Parent-Teacher Association met at the school on hursday afternoon with Mrs. C. H. Crawford presiding. Miss Anne Scott a canteen worker of the World War gave a very interesting talk about Armistice Day at the front.

A delightful Armistice Day program was given by the children of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades. "America" was sung by a group of fifth grade children; "America the Beautiful," was sung by a group of fourth grade children; "The Brotherhood," by Reed Huestis, was splendidly read by his son, Charles Huestis, of the fifth grade; "Le Marsellaise" was sung by a group of sixth grade children; "The Recessional" was given by Betty Goodrich, Lila Swanson, Jack Ulmer and Waldo Winger, of the fifth grade.

Tea and cake were served to a large attendance. The fifth grade won the picture for the month of November, having 25 mothers present.

LUNCHEON-SHOWER FOR MISS WENDELL

Miss Susan Wendell, who will soon become the bride of Howard Raymond of Grand Rapids, Mich., was the guest of honor at a luncheon and shower given Wednesday by Mrs. Peter Ferry at her home on Acacia.

Pink anw white chrysanthemums were used in the decoration of the table, on which the nut baskets were little wedding bells. Kewpies in bridal attire also decorated the board.

Following the luncheon, five hundred was played, the first and second prizes going to Mrs. Herman Nelson and Mrs. Jesse Smith, respectively.

At the psychological moment, little Katherine and Leo Ferry, children of the hostess, dressed as bride and groom, appeared, each carrying a basket filled with miscellaneous gifts. These were presented to Miss Wendell. She was taken completely by surprise. They marched in to the strains of a wedding march played by Mrs. Landregan. The guest list included Mesdames Monaghan, Keleher, Brennan, Salmacia, Clark, Carrie Smith, Jesse Smith, Landrigan, Doll, Chappius, Townsend, Nelson, Huesman, O'Brien, Miss Emma Ruprecht, and the guest of honor, Miss Wendell, who will make her home in Grand Rapids after her wedding, which will take place on Thanksgiving.

MAIL POUCH LOST

PASADENA, Nov. 10.—A Pasadena mail pouch was stolen or lost last night between here and Los Angeles, giving rise to the rumor that there had been a robbery. The pouch, according to Postmaster Clark McClain, was delivered to an Oak Knoll car of the Pacific Electric in the usual routine. When the car arrived at Los Angeles the pouch was missing. Postal inspectors at Los Angeles have been advised of the loss and are investigating.

INTERMEDIATE IS VICTORIOUS AGAIN

The soccer game between the first team of Intermediate and the Cerritos team, played on the Cerritos field Tuesday afternoon, resulted in a score of 4 to 0 in favor of Intermediate. Cerritos boys did good work but were prevented from scoring by the superior strength of the opposing team. Intermedate has won every game so far in the tri-city league games and has therefore secured the championship, although the series is not yet completed. Is last game will be played next Tuesday afternoon with Eagle Rock.

MALTY KITTEN'S TRIC K WORKED—ALMOST

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright. 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

When they finished their visit with Malty Kitten's Man, Tommy Peele and Louis Thomson climbed up on the tall back of Redskin the colt, and Tommy's big cousin Sandy jumped on the roan mare, because she was so skittish she wouldn't stand still for him. Off they set for home, with the two horses dancing and prancing.

Tommy whistled cheerfully to his old dog Watch, but Sandy spoke very severely to Trailer the Hound. Of course he couldn't understand why Trailer would run away from him and never come back till they came all this long way to fnd him.

Watch trotted soberly at Redskin's heels. "Sounds like Sandy was mad at Trailer, all right enough," he growled to himself. "I wonder if he really means to shoot him, like Trailer says. If I was that hound I'd just roach up my spunk and show him I was as good a hunter as anyone. I wouldn't be scared of any fox that ever yapped. Still, a hound can't stand a licking and I reckon those foxes gave him a good one. I'm glad I'm not a hound.

He cocked an ear at Trailer. The poor beast had run way on ahead, like Malty Kitten advised him. He was trying hard to hold up his tail, though he only just managed to keep it from dragging. He was trying hard to sing, though he only went "Tow-row-row!" which didn't mean anything. But Malty Kitten was right. Sandy was fooled; he thought Trailer was really trying to hunt again.

Malty was right about the foxes, too. They hadn't been lying in wait for him when Redskin and the roan mare galloped past the Big Marsh—they were off catching a duck with a broken wing so they didn't dream he'd have anyone to help him. His "Tow-rowing" woke them out of a nice nap. "There's that fool dog again," said one. "Let's give him another good nip," said the other. So—.

That was where Malty made his mistake. When Trailer got almost out of sight Sandy whistled to him. "Now's my time to hide," he said to himself. "And there's a nice thick bush to hide in." He was all curled up, waiting for Sandy and Tommy to go past when—

Those foxes pounced on him!

"Ki-yi! Ki-yi! Help! Help!" he yelped at the top of his lungs. He couldn't get out to run. He could only back into the branches and try to snap two ways at once.

"Ha!" yapped a fox. "What's that? See who's coming!" For his sharp ears had heard Watch bark back "Keep a-fighting, Trailer! Keep a-fighting!"

RANGER TILTON IS MARK OF YOUNGSTER

Adams Cannery to Soon Start Large Pack of Olives; Other Items

SUNLAND, Nov. 10.—When jovial and rotund Forest Ranger H. B. Tilton returned to his home in the small hours of the morning, November 1, he found that the boys in their Hallowe'en pranks had put his horse in the bedroom, the cart on the roof, and all the bedding in a tree, but being of a sunny nature Tilton took it all as a huge joke. His duties being over for the season we are sorry to hear that he is going to retire to the vast solitudes of the big Tujunga canyon, there to endeavor to secure a well earned rest and try and regain some of the weight he lost last summer fighting fires. We wish him the best of luck and may his shadow never grow less.

The Sunland C. of C. is giving an old time turkey shoot Sunday, November 20th. Turkeys, geese, and ducks are the prizes. Be sure and come. If you don't care to shoot have a look at the finest oak trees in this part of the state.

The Monte Vista lodge for undernourished children is doing some fine work under the able direction of Mrs. Martin, matron, and Miss Geddes, instructor. The children come out from the city sickly and weak but after a few days the improvement is very plain. There are about 20 kids here now and you would hardly know they were in town. They never run loose on the streets, although there is no fence around the place. The institution can handle 65 children but being solely dependent on donations to carry the work on, they have not enough funds to take care of any more just now. It is a very worthy cause and deserves help. It is maintained by the Council of Community Service of Los Angeles. Mrs. J. T. Anderson is president.

The Adams cannery is about to start on one of the largest packs of olives that they have handled in some time. Mr. Adams is now in the north contracting for all he can get. There have been very few olives in this valley the last two seasons owing to climatic conditions, which were very unusual. The cannery is quite an institution; it not only gives employment to a number of people, but it also indicates the prosperity of the valley.

The baseball team went to Wilmington Sunday and were defeated 7 to 3. The Sunday before they played at Ontario and lost. They should stay on the home grounds for a while until they have more practice.

Jean Stratton Porter, the noted writer and her daughter, paid Sunland a visit Sunday.

FRESNO GIRL MOST LIKE VENUS' FORM

FRESNO, Nov. 9.—Gertrude Eggett, 25 year old Fresno girl, has been acclaimed the most perfectly formed woman in the United States, according to telegraphic advices reaching here from New York today. Miss Eggett was declared winner over 10,000 entrants in a national contest sponsored by a New York publication on physical culture. She was one of seven girls who were taken to New York for final judging, the preliminary judgments being made from photographs and measurements.

She will receive her choice of a cash prize or a contract to enter motion pictures.

Prior to this, Miss Eggett was a clerk in a local business firm. She is also an amateur dancer.

GOVERNOR PARDONS THREE FROM PRISON

American, Italian and Chinaman Come in for Big Heartedness

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 10.—Two pardons and one commutation of a life sentence were granted b yGovernor William D. Stephens. The pardons were given to an American and an Italian, the commutation was granted a Chinaman.

Joseph Wilson of San Luis Obispo, sentenced in 1907 to serve nine years in San Quentin prison for manslaughter was restored to citizenship by order of the governor. Wilson shot a man named Gilson, a San Luis Obispo storekeeper, when the latter attacked him with a bottle. Dan Cuiffo, for the past eight years a foreman on the Miller & Lux ranch of Madera county, was also restored to citizenshiu. He was sentenced to 14 years in San Quentin for robbery.

Ah Dan, a Chinaman, sentenced to life imprisonment for the shooting of another Chinaman in Butte county in 1906, was released from all state custody by order of the governor. Dan shot the Chinaman in the leg and due to carelessness infection set in resulting in the Chinaman's death.

We are fond of saying that everybody has a right to his own views, but we don't believe it. We'd all make everybody think like we do if we could.

THE EVENING STORY

OLD FLAMES

(Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner)

Myrtle Bly was planting arum-lily bulbs that sunny October morning when Corp. Hotchkiss came into the yard. Excitement flaunted in the feather on Cora's smart hat, wiggled in the fringe of her skirt, snapped in her big black eyes. At 48 she was a handsome woman, and Myrtle, looking up from where she knelt, said so. "I declare, Cote, the older you get the better looking you are!" she exclaimed.

Mrs. Hotchkiss—she had been a widow long enough to do without the slightest semblance of a weed—laughed. "That doesn't speak very well for my youth, or else it bids me look a long way forward. Do you expect me to live to be a hundred? Get up, Myrt, out of the dirt this instant. I've something to tell you."

Mrytle arose. She was a merry old maid of 47, with blond hair that was only pleasantly gray and a figure that had all the rotundity of a Dutch cheese. In her way she was even handsomer than her friend. "Let's sit down on the bench," she invited. "Now what's your news?"

"Take a good long breath first, for I'm going to take your breath away. Gus Cody is in town!"

"No! You don't say so!" Myrtle stared at Cora.

"He's visiting at the Redfields. You know, Helen Redfield is his cousin. That's ancient history. I've seen him. In fact, I met him on my way here. He asked after you."

Mrytle laughed. "What does he look like?" she asked curiously.

"Like a very dignified and reverend gentleman. But you will see for yourself. I've invited him to my house for dinner to-night, and you must come, too."

Myrtle was silent at first; then she reached forth, pulled a rose from a bush and gave it to Cora. The little interlude covered her embarrassment. "I'll come, of course," she replied. "But won't it seem queer for us three to be together again?"

"Well—" Cora sighed—"he may have forgotten—if one ever does forget such things—how you and I used to fight over him. We got quite tragic. I always thought that was why he went away. He was always so timid. I suppose we did cut up awful, but honest' Myrt, I was dead in love with him."

"So was I," Myrtle confessed. "That wasn't why I didn't marry somebody else, though. By the time I'd got over that affair Uncle Tom died and left me all that money. After that freedom seemed pretty sweet. I just couldn't bear to tie myself down. But I must say, Cote, that you were an amazingly successful married woman, and as a widow you can't be surpassed."

"Flatterer!" Cora arose. "Well, fix up your prettiest and come to dinner to-night and we'll see what the Rev Doctor Cady thinks of us. Myrt, one thing more. Doesn't it seem queer that after the open feud of our girl hood days because of that man we should have become such warm friends, such amicable companions? I can't imagine our having a word now, can you?"

"Time has seasoned us," Myrtle verbenas for your table?"

"No, I'm going to use melpomene lilies and maidenhair ferns. They're more showy. Oh, I'm going to make a great spread for the Reverend Doctor, and don't you forget it!" she turned away with a laugh.

Myrtle watched her friend's tall, graceful figure as it moved down the street. Her eyes were full of speculation. When Cora had disappeared from view she returned to her bulb planting. "I wonder if Gus could persuade Cora to marry him now," she though. "She'd have to go out west to live and we'd be separated forever. Doesn't seem as if she would have him when she's refused Judge Arnold twice to my knowledge, but you never can tell. Maybe,"—her pink cheecks dimpled—"I myself shall feel a revival of that ancient sentiment. You never can tell either."

At four o'clock Myrtle went to her room to arm herself for the fray. She put her light hair into kid curlers and lay down for a nap. She slept profoundly and arose refreshed. A bath stimulated her still further. While she was doing her hair she pondered the question of dress. There were at least three gowns hanging in her closet that were becoming enough for even so important an occasion. At last she rejected the taupe one. Cora might possibly wear taupe. Then she weeded out the gray georgette; it was too repressed. This left the black spangled net for her to put on, and when she was dressed she felt that she had chosen wisely.

"I hope he'll perceive the difference in my clothes," she thought. "I used to wear gingham on Sunday and was glad to have it, but that was before I even dreamed of inheriting Uncle Tom's money. And Cote wesn't any better off. Can't any one tell me she doesn't enjoy Peter Hotchkiss' money. I know she does."

As a last touch Myrtle flung her velvet cape over her shoulders, for the evening was cool. She found the handsome Hatchkiss house alive with lights. Cora's incomparable maid let her in, and Cora herself, wearing the taupe dress, leaned over the balustrade of the carved and gleaming staircase.

"Come on up, Myrt!" Cora cried. "I'm not quite ready to come down."

Cora was before her cheval glass giving a last caress to her face, "I'm glad you wore the black one," she said, as Myrtle's reflection appeared beside her own in the mirror. "It brings out your hair so. There! I guess I'll do."

"Sh—sh" Myrtle lifted a finger. Through the open window came a sound from the street below. It was years since Myrtle had heard that nervous throat-clearing "a-hem, a-hem," but she recognized it instantly. "That's Gus," she whispered.

Cora had heard it, too. She flew toward the glistening stairs and went down with the assurance of perfect practice. Myrtle followed close behind, with less daring and far less facility of footing. When she slipped she gave a cry, let go the railing and clutched Cora. Cora's slender height toppled under the unexpected burden, and when Myrtle went down Cora went with her. They struck the bottom step in a tangle. As Myrtle, conscious, not so much of hurt as of dismay, tried to rise, Cora attempted not only to haul herself up but to aid her friend. They struggled thus ineffectually with faces full of concern.

Myrtle faced the unobscured glass in the massive hall door. She saw there an astonished, pale, horrified face which, even under the stress of present emotion, did not lose its clerical dignity of expression. The reverend doctor had put forth his hand to ring the bell, but he stayed it when he saw what was going on within. When the two women were finally righted he was gone.

Cora ran to the door, Myrtle after her. Together they peered out. A tall, thin shape was hurrying down the street toward the Redfields.

"He's run away!" gasped Cora.

"He must have thought we were fighting over him, just as we used to!" panted Mytrle.

They closed the door and stood leaning aginst it, staring at each other until laughter brought relief

"RUSTY TOP" GIRLS TO BE ADMITTED FREE

Miss Bobby Burns Murray, producer of the "League of Notions," one of the feature attractions with the Sheesley shows, has auburn hair and for this reason every girl in Glendale who has auburn hair will be admitted free to her show during the week by just paying war tax. Bobby has a claim, when in pinafores she was known to her school chums as "Carrots," and she asserts that this monicer came from the fact that she had and still has the reddest of red hair, and so she is holding open house to those fortunate ones blessed with auburn locks.

FARMERS PLANNING MARKET THEIR OWN LIVESTOCK NOW

Will Hereafter Have Something to Say About Distribution of Stock

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Farmers today planned to market their own livestock on a co-operative basis. Every livestock producing section was represented in a conference which met here today at the call of the American Farm Bureau Federation to ratify a co-operative marketing plan drawn up by the federation's committee of fifteen. According to J. R. Howard, president of the federation, the committee report includes:

Provisions to give the farmer something to say about the distribution of his stock. Plans for a farmer-owned and controlled livestock commission at the stock yards. Methods of orderly marketing of livestock, so as to prevent gluts on the market and consequent sharp declines in prices.

"The farmers of the nation have determined to market their own livestock on a cooperative basis," said Howard. "Our plan represents the natural growth of the Co-operative Livestock Shipping association movement in America."

KANSAS CITY IS IN FIGHT ON LANDLORD

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 10.—This city is building to beat the landlord profiteers. This fact was made evident by a report recently issued by the American Contractors' Association, which shows Kansas City spent 220 per cent more in building during September, this year, than the same month in 1920.

Kansas City leads all other Mid-Western cities in building activities. Wichita has gained 110 per cent over last year and Omaha 50 per cent. According to statistics compiled by the association mentioned previously the building in Kansas City during September amounted to $1,865,850. During the same month last year, $582,300 was spent.

BEAUMONT GIRLS MUST WEAR 'EM ALL

BEAUMONT, Texas, Nov. 10.—Police get some queer requests, but Day Sergeant Waldrope, of the local force, thinks one made to him recently takes the cake. It was shortly after a young woman had been arrested for appearing on the street with too little clothing on. The phone at headquarters rang, and a sweet voice said to the sergeant, "Won't you please come up to see me? I just got into town, and I want to be sure I have enough clothes on." The sergeant pondered a moment and then replied: "You'll have to excuse me, ma'am, I'm a married man."

BANKER OPPOSED TO CANCEL DEBTS

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 10.—Opposition to William Jennings Bryan's suggestion that the United States cancel allied debts to promote disarmament, was expressed today by A. L. Mills, president of the First National Bank of Portland.

"I don't believe that cancelling debts to many foreign nations from whom we expect no harm would affect the armaments of England and Japan, who should be the ones for the United States to consider," he said. He added that he beblieved it would be "economically unwise."

A modern girl not only knows when she's well off, but she knows who of her men friends are.

OHIO GIRL BACKS OVER 250 FOOT CLIFF

STEUBENVILLE, O., Nov. 10.—Seventeen-year-old Bessie Phillipson wanted to learn how to drive an automobile. She got in the car. When Jack Coburn cranked it she put the machine in reverse. Tearing a porch off a home, the car continued its backward flight. Breaking through a fence it went over a 250-foot cliff, falling where children had been playing only a few seconds before.

The little folk escaped harm because they started on a run after an ice wagon team which, scared by the backward moving auto, ran away. Just as the railroad safety gates stopped the team at a crossing, a passenger train whizzed by.

Thrown out of the machine, Miss Phillipson landed in a flower garden. She was uninjured.

Town farmers are now beginning to harvest next year's crops.

NOT CHANGE POLICY BECAUSE DEATH PREMIER HARA

Uchida Says Japan's Plans Not Changed From Hara's Outline

(Copyright 1921 by the United Press)

TOKIO, Nov. 10.—Assurance that Japan's policies and attitude in the Washington conference on the limitation of armaments and Pacific problems would remain unchanged despite the situation resulting from the assasination of Premier Hara, was given today by Viscount Uchida, temporary premier.

Uchida declared in an exclusive interview with the United Press—the first given any foreign correspondent—that Japan's position in the conference will be the same as defined by Premier Hara.

"Despite the tragedy which removed Premier Hara from the leadership of the Japanese government, Japan's program and attitude in the conference on limitation of armaments will be maintained as defined under Hara's leadership," Viscount Uchida declared. "Furthermore, change in the complexion of the cabinet will not affect in any way Japanese foreign policies, particularly those policies affecting Shantung and Siberia.

"Japan sincerely hopes that an outspoken exchange of views on limitation of armaments, Pacific and Far Eastern questions will result in the furtherance of good understanding among the nations concerned and also in the recognition of the legitimate rights and interests of each power represented at the Washington meeting.

"Japan is ready to concur in any project for the equitable reduction of armaments consistent with national security. Wherefore it is Japan's ardent desire that the glorious enterprise initiated by President Harding will be crowned with signal success.

"It is sufficient for me to say that the confident hope which all Japan places in the Washington conference remains unshaken, and the government awaits the inauguration of the disarmament conference with its interest and loyalty only intensified by the tragedy which removed Premier Hara."

Selection of a permanent successor to Hara still was in question today. Utaro Noda, minister of communications, has appeared as a new and prominent possibility for the premiership. Noda had a meeting with Marquis Saionji immediately following the return of Saionji on his trip to Odo where he conferred with Prince Yamagata, who is playing a dominating hand in present events although confined to a sick bed.

Marquis Saionji, it was understood, is now in a position where he can accept or refuse the premiership, but in case Saionji should refuse, Noda today was considered a leading possibility.

MEAT PROFITEERS AMONG RETAILERS

Government Says Retailers Are Pocketing Huge Profits Now

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A campaign against "meat profiteers" will begin within a few days by the department of agriculture which is determined to bring down retail meat prices. The department has just completed a survey which shows, officials said, that retail meat prices the country over are on an average of 117 per cent higher than before the war. The survey shows most of this going into the pocket of retail meat dealers as profit.

Various means are being considered by the department to force down meat prices. One plan is to permit big packers to establish retail stores and sell directly to the public. Another plan is to induce "chain stores" such as are maintained in practically all cities, to sell meats. Still another is to foster establishment of cooperative meat markets.

FIDDLER TRIES GET $10,000 DAMAGES

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—Nero, who fiddled while Rome burned, was not a professional musician, and his fiddling fingers didn't amount to much. With P. B. Hood, of Perryville, it is different. His "fiddling fingers" were necessary to make a living, he says. An accident on the Frisco railroad, he alleges in a petition filed at Poplan Bluff, impaired his fiddling fingers and left arm so badly that he cannot "fiddle as good as he used to." He asks $10,000 damages.

Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from your druggist and limber up. HAPPY? YES, BUT NOT TOGETHER

Mrs. H. H. Van Loan, wife of the well-known author, who admits they have separated, though one would not think so to hear them praise each other.. "Oh, she is a wonderful girl, is my wife!" says Mr. Van Loan. "He's just the most darling man!" said she. "Happy? Why, we couldn't be any happier," they both said in unison. Then they added, "but not together." Thus endeth the tale of the Van Loans. They have been separated since last May.

GOLDEN IS GETTING TESTIMONY FOR ARBUCKLE CASE

Will Combat Evidence to Be Introduced By Defense Next Week

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—I. M. Golden, assistant district attorney at San Francisco, arrived here late today to take depositions of witnesses to be used against Roscoe Arbuckle when he is brought up for trial for manslaughter in connection with the death of Virginia Rappe, screen actress, next Monday.

Golden refused to divulge the names of the witnesses he will interview. It is believed, however, he will get depositions to disprove testimony of witnesses taken here recently who swore that Miss Rappe was in frail physical condition.

"The other witnesses must be mistaken," said Golden. "We can prove she was in a very good physical condition."

POWDER HORN OVER THREE HUNDRED

OTTERVILLE, Ill., Nov. 10.—Handed down through posterity in six generations, a peculiarly-curved powder-horn more than three centuries old, a relic of the Colonial French War and used as a talisman by four "Jason Humistons" in four of the important wars of this country, is the property of Andrew Jason Humiston, of this little town.

The relic was secured in 1690 by Jason Humiston, of Connecticut, during the Colonial French War, and was worn by him during the remainder of that war. It was among the spoils taken by Humiston from an Indian whom he had killed while scouting in a woods.

The relic has been handed down by the Humiston family to be worn successively by blood issues of the family bearing the name, Jason Humiston. Jason, Jr., the son of the first possessor of the relic, carried it during the entire period of the Revolutionary War. Jason the third used it as a talisman during the War of 1812. The fourth Jason died in the South, and his son, Jason the fifth, carried it as a talisman during the Civil War.

Andrew Jason Humiston, a grand son of Jason the fifth, is now in possession of the relic and has owned it for more than forty years. Upon his death it will revert to his son, James Jason Humiston, now six years of age.

BOSTON COUNCIL O. K. STOCKING BILL

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 10.—That he is receiving dream messages from Mars which are superior to all forms of government is the claim made by Professor Charles V. Barton, Santa Cruz, Calif., on a printed postcard he mailed to City Clerk Moore here.

Professor Barton informed Clerk Moore that he is able, also, to settle all problems of politics, tariff and graft, as well as all labor troubles.

An interesting portion of the communication was the assertion that, for this cure-all information the professor made a charge of only twenty cents to cover the cost of mailing and preparing two letters.

BURCH NOT WORRIED OVER WHAT FUTURE HAS IN STORE

Says "It Is Written" and Whichever Way Wind Blows He Will Meet It

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—An absolute fatalist, a true believer in the philosophy that all things in the world are planned by a divine, omniscient, omnipotent hand and that it is useless to struggle against "things that are to be"—this is Arthur C. Burch, minister's son about to stand trial for murder.

So strong is his faith that everything will happen as planned regardless of human interference, Burch has at no time appeared downhearted since his arrest three months ago following the Beverly Glen tragedy, wherein John Belton Kennedy was shot to death.

He has never lost sleep, he has never lost his appetite. Although Madalynne Obenchain, the girl with whom he is under indictment, has been broken in health and spirit since her arrest, Burch remains absolutely imperturbable and apparently happy. He does not say his attitude of cheer is caused by an easy conscience. He says vehemently it is because he knows that whatever has happened and is yet to happen is simply what a divine power has planned.

"If they set me free tomorrow, I shall walk out of the jail with a feeling that it could not have happened otherwise," Burch said. "If they send me to San Quentin for the rest of my life, I shall feel just the same. It is in the cards. It is for the best."

He hesitated a moment. Then:

"If they sentence me to hang—when I feel the noose slip around my neck I shall not protest. I shall know that what happens was meant to happen.

"We are simply pawns in an inscrutable hand."

So the energetic, picturesque little man paces the jail corridors, always busy, chatting and laughing, waiting with apparent contentment the opening of his trial on November 22.

OFFERS SELL TIPS FOR ONLY 20 CENTS

Boston, Nov. 10.—Silk stockings—252 scarlet paris of 'em, of the feminine gender—may be "decorations," or, then again, they may be "entertainment," it it was revealed in a bill from a local department store against the city of Boston. The dignified members of the Finance Commission O.K.'d the bill only after it was explained that the stockings were worn effectively as decorations by Back Bay society girls who volunteered to act as waitresses when the city was entertaining the recent American Medical Society convention here.

NEAR PANIC WHEN FERRYBOAT COLLIDES

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—Several hundred passengers on the Northwestern Pacific ferry steamer Sausalito were thrown into a moment of near panic early today when the ferry boat and a Western Pacific barge collided off the Vallejo street wharf in San Francisco bay. A part of the rail of the Sausalito was torn away, but she was able to proceed to Sausalito under her own power.

HOG CROP REDUCED

PLENARY SESSIONS ARMS CONFERENCE OPEN TO PRESS

Whenever Full Membership Is Present, Press to Have Access

(Copyright, 1921, by the United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The American delegation has agreed that all plenary sessions of the arms limitation conference shall be open, Senator Lodge, one of America's delegates, told the United Press.

This means that whenever the full membership of the conference meets, the press will be present, if the American view prevails.

The American delegation's belief, it revealed, is that the conference should function somewhat similar to congress. Various questions before the conference will be turned over to committees.

These committees probably will hold secret sessions, although this has not yet been determined, Lodge said.

Then, under the American plan, when a committee has agreed upon a program it will be taken before the full conference and threshed out in the open just as is done in congress.

The American delegation has discussed the question thoroughly and has agreed on fullest publicity. No consideration has been given by the American delegation to throwing open such proceedings of the conference as committee meetings and there is no thought that the publicity plan will be so ambitious.

"I don't believe the press is to be excluded from any of the full sessions of the conference," Senator Lodge said. "That question has been thoroughly discussed by the American delegation. I think it undoubtedly is intended to have the press admitted to all the full, or plenary, sessions of the conference. I am not speaking with the authority of the American delegation, but that it is my personal understanding of what will be done."

CAUGHT WITH GOODS YOUTH GETS 5 YEARS

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Nov. 10.—The drastic operation of the West Virginia state prohibition laws is shown by the penalty imposed upon Claude Metz, a young man, by Judge E. M. Showalter, of the Marion county criminal court here. Metz was sentenced to serve five years in the state penitentiary at Moundsville for having two bottles of whiskey on his hip. That seems rather severe, but the state law provides that a second conviction for violation of the prohibition law is a felony punishable by penitentiary confinement, and the prosecution showed that Metz had once before served a jail term for violating the prohibition laws. In addition, the judge said, in passing sentence, Metz had been arrested numerous times for bootlegging.

BIG PACKERS START WAGE REDUCTION TALK WITH UNION

Plant Assemblies Told Wage Cut Is Last Reduction To Be Made

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Notice has been served on packer employes of the country that wages must be reduced immediately. The "big five" packers informed company unions of the desire of the employers to open negotiations at once to arrange a wage cut. The move of packers to cut wages followed the declaration of an open shop in the industry after the agreement under which wages were set during the war period expired on September 15. The regular union organizations have voted to strike against the open shop declarations and have bitterly fought "company unions." These were formed last spring and the wage cut is the first matter brought up for their re-consideration.

In the notice sent the plant assemblies, as the company unions are termed, no definite amount for the proposed wage cut was named. Louis Swift, president of the Swift Packing company, in a letter to the plant assemblies of his concern, declared the company had "reduced expenses in every other way before announcing the need of a wage reduction.

"We trust members of our organization realize that we want them to suffer as little hardship as posible from the hard times which have befallen the country," Swift continued. "It is only because of great necessity that we bring up the need of a further substantial reduction in expenses so that we can meet competition of other concerns operating at much lower labor costs. It is a well-known fact that wages in other industries have come down much faster than in the packing industry. We have held on on the matter as long as we possibly can—longer than business warranted."
